

WHAT IS CLAIMED IS:

1. A process for matching clients to lawyers comprising:
inputting into a database information about a client's case; inputting into a database information concerning an attorney's background; and matching said client to an attorney based on said information.
2. The process of claim 1, further comprising:
inputting information about a potential defendant and eliminating said attorney as a match for said client if said attorney represents said defendant.
3. A system for matching clients to lawyers comprising:
a database;
said database comprising information about a client's case and information about attorney's backgrounds;
said system matching said client to an attorney based on said information.
4. The system of claim 3, wherein said database further comprises:
information about a potential defendant in regards to said client's case.
5. The system of claim 3, wherein said information about said client's case comprises:
jurisdiction of said case, type of attorney needed, and personal information about said client.
6. The system of claim 3, wherein said information about an attorney comprises:
personal information about said attorney, legal background of said attorney and references regarding said attorney.

7. A method for hiring lawyers and managing a case comprising:
 - receiving information about a client's case;
 - selecting a managing lawyer based on said client's case;
 - negotiating an agreement between said client and said managing lawyer;
 - said managing lawyer selecting a primary lawyer; and
 - electronically linking into a secured database said client, said managing lawyer, and said primary lawyer.